

Testimonials

In May of this year, we experienced a significant crisis in our company. We migrated our websites to "better servers" with one of the larger hosting providers, which were supposed to operate without any issues. However, it turned out that when running an e-commerce business, such an action, without proper preparation, can cause major slowdowns and technical problems (yes, we didn't have a development version of the site to test on the new server). As a result, this caused significant losses for our company.

We sought help from around 10 developers and server specialists in various fields, but nothing worked. Fortunately, we came across Sopchy, where, in addition to extensive knowledge and expertise, we received excellent customer service and care. Today, we've been working together for several months, and we plan to continue our collaboration for a long time.
